Transcribed by: Adrienne Smith & David Widman - Humber College

NARRATOR: An adult chimpanzee sits in the rainforest, grooming the fur of a baby chimp that is lying in front of it, one foot in the air supported by the adult chimp.

MAN: One of the most amazing moments I remember—

NARRATOR: A man in a green khaki shirt is positioned in front of the roots of a large moss-covered tree in the rainforest.

MAN: ...was when Freddie was lying down on the forest floor and went to sleep—

NARRATOR: A baby chimp is lying on its back, in the arms of an adult chimp sleeping on the forest floor.

MAN: ...and he was cradling Oscar in his arms. Oscar was lying on his back and he was looking up at the canopy—

NARRATOR: The forest canopy, filled with vivid green leaves and dappled sunlight.

MAN: ...but he looked as though he was contemplating life.

NARRATOR: The baby chimp scratches his lip and gazes upwards.

MAN: It looked so human in the way that, um, people would lie in a hammock, perhaps. And they would just think about things.

NARRATOR: The baby chimp gazes steadily upwards, blinking occasionally.
